Best Wheat In South

FOR the most part the Peace River district is taking the statement made by Dr. A. G. McCalla, of the University of Alberta, that wheat grown there lacks strength, with calmness. There has been a general outcry and practical minds in the north suggest that the ultimate effect may be beneficial for farmers will diversify more and feed their grain rather than ship it out. In this way a secure and more dependable agriculture can be built up and the northern districts will not depend to anything like the same extent up on the vagaries of the wheat market and the danger of another glut of that cereal in the world.

The Edmonton Journal mentions that of the varieties of wheat extant Reward and Garnet are recommended for the grey soils areas in the north, and the suggestion is made that what wheat is grown there should be restricted to these two kinds. Garnet, it seems, is most favored by farmers in the northern districts, and the present spread between the best grade of that variety and the One Northern of the Marquis types is only about five cents a bushel. With a discount of only cents Garnet could be profitably grown, but of course the spread might widen if a considerably larger volume of Garnet were produced than at present.

Many farmers in Southern Alberta still believe that Garnet is sold largely on the reputation of Canadian wheat, the bulk of it being mixed with Marquis types. Certainly in recent years there has been a preference given to Canadian wheat known to contain a minimum of Garnet admixtures. Vancouver stores of wheat, for instance, have been more often than not at a discount below price of wheat stored on the Atlantic. There may be other factors entering into the situation, but so far as discernible there does not seem to be any great demand for Garnet wheat from Canada in its pure state, which is the way British millers ask for it to be shipped.

In any event the strong wheat comes from the southern part of Alberta and the grey soils regions cannot compete with the south's production on a quality basis, no matter what kind of wheat is grown in the north. The sensible course, therefore, would be to allow the south to grow the bulk of the province's export wheat and as little as possible of the wheat grown in the grey soils area should be permitted to go into international trade channels.

Work Must Be Found

Through jobs men and women are insured against privation and kept off relief. Jobs enable them to hold up their heads among their fellow-beings, to be self-supporting, to maintain homes, to educate and raise families.

With the exception of Alberta, the Dominion has made substantial progress in the past year in the matter of increased employment. In fact, 60,000 jobs have been made available to Canadians in 11 months, or thereabouts. On every hand—with the exception of Alberta—there is a definite upward swing in the employment pendulum.

What is our situation here? According to statistics issued for the week of December 12, 1936, Alberta had 2,694 more jobless than for the same week of 1935.

The fact is that the present policy of debt repudiation has not increased employment, but has increased unemployment. If our men and women are to be found jobs, as men and women are finding jobs in other provinces of the Dominion, the credit of Alberta must be restored.

This statement is one of a series written by The Mortgage Loans Association of the Province of Alberta. The Association is composed of 34 member companies. It represents hundreds of thousands of small investments by typical Canadians. Its loans to citizens of Alberta amount to some forty-five million dollars. Another Boom Coming?

A warning against an impending boom must appeal somewhat in the category of an anxiety to Western Canadians at the moment, yet there are no lacking signs that what might ultimately prove a real disaster is in the making on the North American continent and more than one authority is predicting it and shaking an admonitory finger.

The attitude of admonition and warning is inspired by memories of the grand orgy of 1928 and 1929 and its reflex debacle when values were wiped out overnight followed by a protracted and painful passage through the valleys of depression.

Those who profess to see another boom in the offing, and some of them are eminent and authoritative economists and statisticians, are not fearful of an era of prosperity founded upon the properly co-ordinated functions of demand and supply, of the application of sound business principles to production and distribution of needed commodities, but what they fear, and possibly with reason, is a repetition of the wild and unfounded enthusiasm which led to a mad scramble to buy stocks at fictitious prices, to a boost in the prices of commodities beyond their real value and to an unparalleled orgy of speculation, all more or less based on the desire of the participants to reap where they had not sown and to "get something for nothing."

To this spirit which raged across the continent like an unbridled prairie fire must be attributed the boom which preceded the profound collapse of the autumn of 1929 and the severity and lengthy duration of the period of penitence and suffering which ensued.

The question which is agitating the minds of exponents of safe recovery based on sound business methods is whether or not the victims of the depression from which the people are only just now emerging have remembered and will heed the lessons which this season of trial should have taught them, or are they and their successors going to one more cast all discretion to the winds and again indulge in a riot of speculation and inflation leading to another depression which may be worse than ever?

Hoping for the best but fearing the worst, these authorities who are prophesying another boom and issuing stern warnings of the ultimate consequences should their fears be realized, are basing their conclusions on the fact that large sums of accumulated money are seeking an outlet, that raw materials and finished products are required in enormous quantities to replace the ravages of decay and obsolescence of the depression era and the superabundant optimism and forgetfulness of human nature which is so apt to make desire the parent of decision, to paraphrase a well known legend.

One of the authorities who fears the imminence of a period of over-expansion, followed by a depression so severe as perhaps "to shake civilization" is Roger W. Babson, well-known business statistician. In articles on the subject he points out that the business pendulum in the United States has swung back to normal and outlines steps which the government of that country has taken in the hope of stemming the possibility of another business over-enthusiasm, but questions whether the brakes will hold in the event of a runaway.

Mr. Babson appropriately points out that legislative and regulatory safeguards are of doubtful value if they run counter to the mob spirit and is pinning his hope to a spiritual revival as a safety valve and effective preventive. Undoubtedly he is right in his belief that such a revival would be far more effective than any man-made laws and control measures.

But no matter how neighbors across the line or residents of Eastern Canada might yield to the lure of an inflationary boom, no matter to what extent they may succumb to a temptation to "whop it up" again, it appears incredible that citizens of Western Canada could so soon be induced to participate, let alone aid in promoting another speculative debacle. The wounds and sores left by the last one must be to too fresh and tender for that.

No, it must be assumed that Western Canadians will be content enough to feel their feet once again firmly on the ground without trying to soar on precarious wings to dangerous heights, at least for some considerable time to come.

Inverted Stomach

Hare Operation Is Performed In A Montreal Hospital

A middle-aged woman was on the way to recovery in a Montreal hospital after an operation for one of the rarest cases of "upside-down stomach" in medical history.

Doctors said the 51-year-old spinster, whose name was withheld, seemed to be progressing favorably toward normal physical condition following the 2½ hour operation that restored her stomach to its right position and corrected the position of her heart, which had been pushed far over to the right side of her body.

What made the case an extreme rarity, hospital authorities said, was the fact that the inverted stomach apparently developed in an otherwise normal adult. Babies are sometimes born with upside-down stomachs, but the medical men declared the occurrence of such a condition in a healthy adult was "most unusual." There have been only 12 examples known to medical science.

The surgeon in charge said the stomach certainly had turned over in the last eight years, and most likely within the last year. Last August, the patient suffered a fall, and it was believed an outgrowth of that.

New Field Crops Valuable

With an average yield of 9.1 bushels at an average price of 87 cents, the 7,360,000 acres of Alberta farm land sown to wheat last year produced 67,000,000 bushels with a total return of $58,290,000. Comparative newcomers to Alberta's field crops, peas and beans topped everything in sight at an average of $150 a bushel.

Mount Rainier's glacier system greatly exceeds that of any other peak in the United States. Twenty-eight rivers of ice creep down its sides throughout the year.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. The itching soreness or painful passage of stool, in nature's warning and proper remedy should be secured at once. For this purpose get from any druggist a package of Hemoroid and use as directed. This formula which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore. Hemoroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is safe to use and it means the height of relief for anyone who risks an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

Ordered A Clean-Up

B.R.C. Starts Purge Following Flood Of Complaints

The British Broadcasting Corporation has ordered the greatest internal "clean-up" in its history.

Broadcasting House has been inundated with complaints from listeners offended by certain items in recent programs. Hence the "purge," Captain Cecil Graves, Controller of Programs, is to survey every department in this campaign to "keep the air clean." A "black book" of forbidden items has already been started.

"Broadcasting has no official censor because it has never needed one," one BBC official said. "We intend to maintain that reputation. Our responsibility lies in the fact that we take programs right to the domestic fireside where all members of the family are gathered."

Comedians "lines" are to be submitted to the Ligeia Entertainment Director four days before the broadcast, and two officials will scrutinize them. Plays which contain strong language are to be rigidly inspected. Even talks will not escape the "clean-up." Protests have also been registered against realistic studio "effects."

Where doubt exists as to the propriety of any item, it will be referred for final decision to the Department Director concerned.

Makes Transport Safer

If Flying Conditions Over Air Routes Are Well Known

Ordinary prudence, to say nothing of the human element involved, would seem to dictate the suspension of air services over certain routes until more is known of conditions that are likely to militate against safe transport, and until airmen are better qualified to combat them with a substantial expectation of success. Certainly the continued growth of fatalities is destined to create a very grave feeling of uneasiness among the public at a time when there is a general desire that they should grow more and more "air-minded."—Montreal Star.

Made Radio History

Madame Chiang Kai-Shek Broadcasts Address In Faultless English

Madame Chiang Kai-Shek, China's "first lady", made radio history as the first Chinese woman to address a world-wide audience.

She spoke in faultless English from her home in commemoration of the third anniversary of China's "new life" movement—a plan she launched with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, her husband and China's political leader for a moral reawakening of the country.

China's "warlord era", with its attendant civil strife, she declared, "is nearing an end because public opinion opposes those who want to settle differences with the sword. National unity is here because the people demand it."

"For a decade Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek devoted himself to uniting scattered armed forces into a national army. Now he is seeking economic advancement."

She stated highways were the chief factor in the economic progress of China and said motor buses now were busy in every province.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just deepens in the bowels. Gas builds up in your stomach. You get constipated. Headaches, poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sick and the world looks pink.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get it all out. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel like a new man. They do the work of nature, ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. See.

France's Declining Birth Rate

Population Has Been Increased By Advent Of Foreigners

The annual number of births in France reached its maximum toward the end of the Second Empire, when it was as high as 1,034,000 in 1868. In 1934 it had fallen to 677,000 and in 1935 to about 650,000, of which nearly 50,000 were the children of foreigners. The birth rate has therefore diminished by 384,000, or nearly a third, although the population has increased since 1868 by three million immigrants or naturalized persons, which has resulted in increasing the population from 38 to 48 million inhabitants. During the period 1900-35, the birth rate has decreased by nearly 100,000. The number of births per marriage had decreased even more rapidly. In 1800 the average number of births in France was 4.5 per marriage, at the end of last century it was 3, today only 2.2, or a diminution of about 50 per cent.—From Nature.

Toronto Physician Says Average Man Does Not Take Proper Care Of His Health

While golf is the finest game for men between 35 and 50; badminton is insane for every man over 40, unless he has been an athlete all his life, Dr. C. O. Young told the members of the Optimist Club of Toronto at their weekly luncheon at the Royal York hotel.

Dr. Young said the average businessman to-day took far more care of his automobile than he did of himself.

"Too many of us," Dr. Young continued, "who come home after a heavy day at the office get into a heated bridge game, smoke too much, or perhaps take one drink too many, and the next day we start with a handicap. It is all due to a nervous tension."

In his opinion, Dr. Young added, poker was far more relaxation than bridge.

QUICK RELIEF! INDIGESTION!

Constipation cleared up, too, after taking "Fruit-a-Lives" short while.

Mrs. James Chalmers, of Falkenberg, Ontario, says: "For over a year I was troubled with indigestion brought on by constipation. I could scarcely eat or drink a thing without severe gas pains and soreness in my stomach. I tried many remedies before Fruit-a-Lives. After taking Fruit-a-Lives a short time I was able to eat and drink anything without unpleasant after-effects. Constipation cleared up and I have never had it since."

The Primary Producer

Chemist Believes Farmer Holds Solution To Surplus Problem

Motor fuel will provide the solution to Canada's problem of surplus agricultural products, Dr. J. Allan Harris, research chemist, at the University of British Columbia, believes.

Motor fuel made from grain, potatoes, apples, pears, cherries and strawberries he placed in the experimental position. Next he predicted building materials, rayon and lacquer made from hay and straw. Artichokes and dahlias would produce sugar.

A blend of only 10 per cent. would account for 50,000,000 gallons of alcohol and remove 28,500,000 bushels of grain each year from the annual surplus, the professor said. In addition to the above mentioned alcohol can be distilled from any surplus agricultural product.

With a reference to dwindling exports the young scientist observed that "the collective stomachs of the world are not large enough to absorb all the farm products of to-day."

Scientists look upon the farmer as a primary producer, not only in the first commodity of life, food, but in the first phase of industry, raw materials, he said. With decreasing natural resource, they expect agriculture to produce the bases of practically everything.

Study Evolution Theory

Scientists To Make Home With Apes In Jungles Of Siam

In hopes of catching a glimpse of man in the making, seven American scientists will make their home for the next nine months with the anthropoid apes in the jungles of Siam, Borneo and Sumatra to make close observations of the life, habits and behavior of the subhuman species in their natural environment, it is announced by Harvard University.

The expedition, which aims to fill in some of the important gaps in the jigsaw of human evolution, will include learned scientists.

The scientists believe that by observing man's immediate ancestors as they live in groups in their native habitats they may obtain living evidence of man in the process of evolution at a stage millions of years before he finally emerged. It is hoped to find missing links in both the physical and cultural aspects of man's slow evolution from ape to man-ape, ape-man and finally man.

Film British Fleet

Manoeuvres Of The British Home And Mediterranean Fleets To Be Shown

For the first time manoeuvres of the British home and Mediterranean fleets are to be made the subject of a film which, it is understood, will eventually be released to the public. The film will be essentially "documentary" in character, but will have a theme. This will concern the adventures of two boys who join the navy, from the moment they put on their uniforms until they find themselves under active service conditions, as shown in the manoeuvres.

The producer is Commander J. L. F. Hunt. He was the captain of the submarine in "Men Like These" and directed "White Ensign".

There are to be four cameras with the "Blue" fleet and four with the "Blue" during the manoeuvres.

Empire Defence

Says Each Dominion Should Realize Its Own Responsibilities

Each Dominion should realize its own imperial responsibilities, and the defence of an Empire scattered over the world should not devolve upon a small island, Leopold Amery, former Dominions Secretary, declared in a speech supporting the Government's defence program.

He said he refused to subscribe to the belief that rearmament meant war and declared it was a great mistake to regard the defence measures as directed against Germany. "When everyone else is putting their treasures into iron vessels can we afford continually to keep ours in brittle, earthenware jars?" he asked.

Thou Shalt Not Love

— A NOVEL BY —
GEORGIA CRAIG

The doctor smiled on her benignly. He had noticed her new wedding ring when she had stripped the gloves from her slender fingers.

"I had hoped you would come back . . . I have often wondered since what happened to you. However, judging by that"—he indicated her shining ring—"you evidently took what advice of mine you were able to get through your head. You've found your vital interest in life, it would appear; your saving interest."

Starrs heard was in a whirl. She hardly dared to believe what her own ears heard, this wonder story that was coming so casually from the lips of the man she had so long believed had condemned her. She leaned forward, eyes pleading, her body tensed.

"You—mean there's nothing the matter with me?" she asked through lips that quivered.

He smiled, and his shoulders shrugged carelessly. "Offhand, without any thorough examination, I would say that you are just about as normal as any young woman of your age. A little too thin, too pale, perhaps. Anemic. Or it could be from worry."

He bent over her desk, looking her straight in the eyes, as his capable fingers tapped on his desk in a "strong" body. "I don't know much about Egyptian history. I know less of this particular superstition that has been playing hob with you. But I do know that the most potent factor of any superstition is the effect it has on the mind of its victim. When you believe a thing with all the strength that's in you, it's quite likely to come true. That's all there is to it, and in your case they were making it come true. Curse of Tut-Amen-Ra—bunk!"

Starrs said, in a still small voice, of one who was trying to reconcile a miracle: "But my father? John Lessing? They—"

"That man who died on the night the tomb was opened—Lessing, did you say his name was?—died of a tropical fever which must have been coming on for some time, and would no doubt have taken him anyway, curse or no curse. Your father was an elderly man, a scholar of sedentary habits who could not stand much strenuous outdoor life. Moreover he had delved into Egyptian lore so long that it was inevitable it would have its effect on him. Superstition and grief over the death of his friend preyed on his mind, until he became obsessed with the idea that he would be the next victim. He was the victim of his own terror. Something like that was happening to you, but you seem to have outgrown it to a great extent, if not entirely. Thank heaven for that!" He smiled again as he straightened up. "And see that you don't go on more digging trips to Egypt. . . . Home, that country's as full of superstition this day as it was five thousand years ago. I've heard that they even believe in the prophecies of those dead diviners of theirs."

Starrs smiled at him, her eyes reminiscent. "We saw one once," she told him. "My father did not believe him. 'I'll never forget what he told me afterward—Love is the only true diviner. You'll know that when the time comes.' Her voice dropped to a whisper, but there was joy in it. 'I think I've discovered he was right.'"

Dr. Morgan nodded emphatically. "He was right, my dear young lady. . . . Quite right."

It took a long time for all that the doctor had said to Starrs to sink into the dazed girl's brain. Then a sense of wild elation swept her like a magic flame. As the doctor explained it all to her, it seemed so simple, so natural. Yes, he was quite right about her, too. She had fled from his office like one possessed on that long ago day, waiting to hear nothing more than: "You won't live another six months."

If only she had waited, and talked the matter over with him then! What pain and terror she would have been saved! But, on the other hand, if she had, the whole course of her life would have been different. She might never have met Michael!

She had worked out her own salvation, even though she had plumbed the depths of human suffering. She was free. Free to live, to love!

It was with this idea inking in her heart, a pean of joy and gladness, that Starrs, her cheeks tingling to a delicate flush, put another question the doctor with her brought back life to her. He smiled again as he got up and went to the door. He opened it and said to the competent young woman in a nurse's uniform: "Please take Mrs. Fairbourne into the examination room, Miss Walker. I'll be with you presently."

It was a woman who felt as if she had been newly born into a world that was the epitome of joy and gladness who made her way through the busy city streets, headed for her own penthouse apartment. A woman with a golden glory racing through her veins. Her head was up proudly. Eyes and lips laughed their sheer joy into the face of the world that suddenly was a marvelously glad, happy place—all of it.

A miracle had happened. There might be those who would attempt to explain it away with prosaic words, but Starrs Ellison Fairbourne knew that it was a miracle.

She was free! Free of the dread that for years had made life a nightmare. Free—and she was going to have a baby! Michael's child, and hers! She was going back to Michael.

It was all so joyous that not until she stood on the threshold of her home from which she had fled did she remember the circumstances of her leaving. She had only been thinking—how glad Michael would be to see her—how happy over the wonderful news she would bring him. Now she remembered. . . . Michael believed she had run away with Lance Marlowe. All during those days she had faced death alone in a somber New York rooming house he had believed that she was in Lance's arms.

Swift alarm cast a darkening shadow across her excitement. She should have made some arrangement to let him know the truth before he saw her. She should have written him of what she had really done, let him know of the curse of Tut-Amen-Ra and what it had so nearly done to her and to him. There was still to be explained those anonymous letters which had come. They were a greater mystery than ever, but now, they, too, could be explained, she felt sure.

The great problem facing her was: How would Michael receive her? Would he and she ever be able to find understanding again?

Using her own key, Starrs silently entered the pent-house apartment. And at the sight which met her eyes the very spirit seemed to leave her. Too late!

Michael was standing there in the centre of the long, low living room with Stephanie Dale. Both of his hands gripped Stephanie's shoulders; his eyes burned intently into hers. He was saying in a strange voice: "It was you all the time, Stephanie. How could I have been so blind?"

Starrs knees trembled weakly and the room blurred in odd dancing lights before her vision. She swayed, clutching at the tapestry curtain for support. "Too late! Of course, it had been Stephanie all the time. His affair with Starrs had been an emotional spree. A mad play-marrying which could never last. And in the few days of her absence he had come to realize it. He wanted Stephanie! Starrs knew there was but one thing left for her to do now. She must go away again quickly—and silently. And then in that moment, just before the tapestry curtain dropped over her still white face, Michael saw her. He cried her name incredulously: "Starrs!"

In an instant all was confusion. Michael was at her side in two leaps. He picked her up and carried her inside the living room. His arms were holding her. He was kissing her on lips and hair and eyes, starved kisses, as though he would never have enough.

Somehow, in the excitement, Stephanie had slipped away. Starrs caught just one glimpse of her flitting through the entry way before the outer door banged on her. Starrs and her husband were alone. And Michael was saying:

How to EASE a COLD

TWO SIMPLE RULES

Instead of buying costly medicines for a cold, try the way almost any doctor you ask will approve as the modern way—"ASPIRIN."

The way you use it is this: Two "Aspirin" tablets the moment you feel a cold coming on, taken with a full glass of water. Repeat, if necessary, according to directions in package. If throat is sore, gargle with three "Aspirin" tablets in 1/2 glass of water for almost instant relief. The "Aspirin" acts to fight fever, aches and pains of a cold and the cold itself. Relief comes quickly and you have wonderful comfort.

"Aspirin" tablets are made in Canada by the Bayer Company, Limited, of Windsor, Ontario.

"Stephanie has just confessed that she sent you those anonymous letters, darling. I made her come here to face me, to accuse her. I found one of them after you'd gone, and it wasn't hard, when I finally got down to thinking of it, to see Stephanie's fine Italian hand. . . . That came of a sudden, after I'd been trying to trace them for days. She wanted to break up our marriage, and she took a childish way of doing it, so childish as those scraps of hers that looked like something Egyptian. She thought they would cover her up; that nobody would ever suspect her. I recognized them as tracing from a ring she sometimes wears. . . . But Starrs, why did you run away? Nobody takes my notice of senseless poison pen letters."

Of course they don't, unless they have known the deadly fear under which Starrs Ellison had so long lived! Stephanie never guessed at the coincidence her letters raised. Oh, Starrs was going to have so much to tell Michael, and how he would understand and pity her! How he would make it up to her! Much to tell, but a lifetime to tell it in. Starrs sighed happily.

Oh, the worry in Michael's dear, white face now, though! Worry over her, the wife he loved! His voice raged out: "I caught Lance's boat before he sailed. He swore he hadn't seen you, and I believed him. I've searched everywhere for you. Starrs, my own dear!"

Starrs felt the sense of ineffable peace which only Michael's arms could bring, stealing through her whole body again. She was cuddled close against his breast. His lips brushed her hair.

She murmured: "There is such a lot to explain, Michael. I don't know where to begin."

Michael said: "Don't start just yet. I just want to hold you here, and make sure that you are mine, that you're real, and won't slip away from me again if I shut my eyes." Then he said what a moment before had been in her own mind. "We have a lifetime ahead of us for explanations, sweetheart!"

A lifetime ahead! The glory of it! Before Starrs' eyes passed an imaginary parade. A parade of dream children, who now could be real. Sturdy little men with clear gray eyes like Michael's. Little girls—like herself!

Five Cents Worth
The doctor met Mrs. Brown in the street. "And how is your husband sleeping, now, Mrs. Brown?" he asked. "Did you give him the sleeping draught?"

"Yes, sir," she replied. "You told me to give him the amount I could get on a small nickel, but as I hadn't any silver I used five pennies and he's been fast asleep for five days."

Coronation Broadcast

Not Merely The Empire, But The Whole World Will Listen In

Not merely the empire but the world will listen to the coronation ceremonies May 12 inside and outside Westminster Abbey. This, the first coronation to be broadcast, will reach out in English and foreign tongues from a battery of 50 microphones.

The earl marshal is considering the feasibility of setting up television machinery in the abbey for the actual crowning. In any event Sir Stephen Tallents, of the British Broadcasting commission, hopes and expects the outside processions will be caught on the wireless screen in their full panoply.

King George VI. will likely conclude the momentous day with a personal message to his subjects. This will probably be delivered at 8:00 p.m., G.M.T. (1 p.m., M.S.T.).

Twenty microphones will be established in the abbey itself so every audible detail of the service will be caught. Along the route microphones will be posted at strategic points and trained observers will describe the passing scene.

The coronation day broadcast will probably start about 10:15 a.m. G.M.T. (the procession times are estimated on the basis of precedent) when the procession begins from Buckingham palace to the abbey. And the abbey broadcast is likely to last from 11:15 a.m. until 2:15 p.m.

Immediately following the service there may be a break until the return procession begins at about 3 p.m., but this lapse is not definitely settled yet. The return procession will be covered with even greater thoroughness, the scenes at Trafalgar Square, St. James's palace and Oxford-Circus to be given special attention.

The evening's schedule includes a program at 6:30 p.m. entitled "The Empire's Homage," which will link up as many parts of the empire as possible and which will be followed by individual messages of loyalty from each dominion and colony. This will conclude with a greeting from the United Kingdom spokesman, perhaps Prime Minister Baldwin. And then His Majesty will probably speak.

Sounds Like Fish Story

Superintendent of Aquarium Says

Fish Snore When They Sleep

Fish do sleep, and some "snore." F. A. Potter, superintendent of Honolulu's tropic fish aquarium, is authority for the first statement. He isn't certain about the snoring, but John Nahaoluha, Hawaiian fisherman, will vouch for it.

"When we are lurch fishing at night we sometimes can't see the fish, but we can hear him snoring," said Nahaoluha. "He sounds like a man. We follow the sound, and find the fish sleeping peacefully on the bottom of the sea."

Others who make their livelihood by spearing fish along coral reefs surrounding Hawaiian islands verify the noisiness of sleeping fish.

A tiny fish that gained fame in popular song, definitely "goes to bed" at night, reports Potter. "Bed" may be a convenient rock on which the brilliantly colored little fish may lean, or under which it may find a sheltered spot. Trigger fish and manglefish, a common inhabitant of island waters, often burrows deep into sand at night comes.

Big parrot fish have a peculiar custom, at least in their Honolulu aquarium tanks. They blow a "bubble" consisting of tenuous material remotely similar to a cobweb, and use it as a sleeping bag. Potter noted.

Some fish apparently never rest. One and other game fish apparently are ready to gobble a meal at any time, and remain in almost constant motion.

Many are capable of making strange sounds, various authorities say. "Grunts" are common in the Atlantic, and gain their name from the croaking noises they emit when taken from the water. Trigger fish in Hawaii make "whooshing" sounds. Trumpet fish, according to one listener, have been heard "tooting" in thin strains, "elfin like in quality." This same expert, writing in "The National Geographic Magazine," reported hearing the "whoop-whoop" of schools of sea drums darting beneath an anchored canoe on a quiet night.

The Oldest Photograph
Believed to be the oldest photograph in the world, a Daguerreotype taken in 1837 is included in a photographic exposition which opened in Versailles, France. The picture shows the heads of several children.

The human eye, at a height of five feet from the ground, can see an object 2.9 miles away at sea or over a level plain.

Little Helps For This Week

The kingdom of God is within you. Luke 17:21.

Lord, take this heart that I would give. Forever to be all Thine own; I to myself no more would live. Come, Lord, be Thou my King alone.

The work assigned to the individual soul is to have life in itself, to make its own sphere, whatever it is, sufficient for a reign of God within itself, thankful if with the place and companionship given to us we are permitted to build an earthly home of grace and goodness, a home like a temple. But if this should be denied us then we may be able to build a home where God shall reign for ourselves at least, that we shall not break with our wills, and whether joyful or struggling with perplexity we shall know His will is law and submission will ever spring from communion of spirit and loving trust.

U G G Head Tells Need For Holding Canada's Markets

Customers will do without Canadian wheat if Price out of Line, Law Warns

By Sam Ross

Article 7

Winnipeg, Feb. 4.—(Special Correspondence)—The Tugue royal grain commission, with a about 1,200,000 words of evidence written into the record and 233 exhibits filed, stands adjourned for about three weeks while Mr. Justice Tugue concludes his inquiry into the textile probe at Ottawa. The grain inquiry is expected to resume in Vancouver about Feb. 25 although changes in these plans may be made.

D. C. MacLachlan, Toronto president of Maple Leaf Milling Company and spokesman for the Canadian National Millers association, and G. S. McArthur, Toronto, secretary of the Ontario Flour Millers association, were the final witnesses before the commission last week. Both advocated continuation of the open market and a method of trading. Proposals of R. S. Law, president of United Grain Growers, Ltd., were laid before the inquiry.

Besides advocating the free and open market as essential to millers, Mr. MacLachlan urged reciprocal trade treaties, stabilization of exchange, equalization of all freight rates on wheat and wheat products from inland points and to seaboard and maintenance of a fair differential between wheat and wheat products for ocean shipments. Protection of the Winnipeg grain exchange against foreign speculative raids was asked by Mr. MacLachlan if the commission found such action necessary.

Charges Canadian millers 'skimmed the cream' off Canadian wheat for its protein content were incorrect and grew from misunderstanding of the practice of millers in balancing wheat to maintain a standard quality of flour. There had been very little selection for protein content in the past two years and at no time had it had any effect on wheat exports. In some cases a premium had been paid for low protein wheat, he said, so that it could be balanced with high protein wheat.

Mr. McArthur supported continuation of the open market and declared that no government agency should be allowed to purchase wheat futures. He also declared a commission should be named to wind up government market operations. Placing emphasis on importance of the Canadian export flour industry, Mr. McArthur urged reciprocal trade agreements and a better freight rate for flour as compared with wheat rates. Development of foreign sales through advertising would be effective, he thought.

Careful protection of Canada's export market was urged by Mr. Law. He declared Canada could not afford to lose its place in the international market for a month, for a week or for even a single day. While quality of Canada's wheat was recognized, customers abroad were willing and able to do without it if prices were too high.

ANCIENT CUSTOM LINGERS ON

Early Church Started Fish Habit that Persists To This Day

Fisheries from the Atlantic to the Pacific are hopeful that the present effort of the Canadian Government to promote the consumption of Canadian fish will result in people eating more fish throughout the week rather than confining this delicacy to Friday.

Though fish has been eaten as a food since prehistoric times, the early Christian Church decreed that no meat should be eaten on Fridays and fast days but that fish might be substituted. From that arose a practice that has persisted down to the present time and has led people of every denomination to associate fish with Friday often to the virtual exclusion of other days.

According to leading executives of the fishing industry, this habit is not only harmful to the industry but is robbing people of many advantages. If the people eat more fish throughout the week, they would be assured of fresher fish and they would get it at lower prices. The increased demand for the products of sea, lake and river would give an impetus to the whole industry and, while retail prices to the public would drop, the price to the fisherman would increase, owing to the lessening of the present overheat caused by the public habit of eating fish mostly on Fridays.

Not only the fishing industry but the medical profession are behind the move to encourage people to eat more fish throughout the week. Many medical columnists of newspapers have gone on record as to the nutritive and healthful value of fish. With its richness in proteins, minerals and other elements, they say, fish is an important article of diet, as nourishing as other foods and more easily digested.

A woman, David, said Mr. Law, should be considered to farmers who desired to obtain the approximate average price and are willing to accept settlement on the basis of an initial payment with the balance in one or more payments. A supervisor for the grain exchange should be considered in view of certain allegations in connection with short selling. He was unaware of any excessive speculative short selling operations.

Referring to pooling, Mr. Law said that when the U G G first supported pooling the objective was to furnish a type of selling service at an average price desired by many farmers but without any objective of controlling prices. The company had urged preservation of the rights of all farmers to market as they desired. He said there existed doubt as to practicability of reviving wheat pools on a contract basis on any extensive scale.
